THE LAND OF DREAMS. I'am going to move to the land of dreams As soon as ever I may! This sneaking over by night, messems,

And leaving at peep o' day, Is one of our silliest human schemes-So now I am going to stay! Why waken at all to my exile long. To faces unloved and cold, Where never my lips can fit to a song,

When it's just as easy-and can't be wrong-To live in that Land of Gold? I was there last night for an hour or two-The sweetest I ever passed I sat in the garden again with you,

But then the sun, like a meddlesome clown, Climbed grinning above the sky; My castle in Dreamland came tumbling down, And tumbling down came I-Just as I bent for a kiss to crown My longing, with none to spy.

And rent me a dream house there; For there you'll be waiting for me. I know. As blushing and fond and fair; And wo'll live and love in the Dreamland glow, The width of the world from care. C. F. LUMMIS.
